* Imagined geographies is a concept developed by a postcolonial scholar Edward Said to grasp the relationship between the meaning given to space and boundaries and the coloniality of power. The workshop focuses on the ways through which these imagined geographies are gendered.

About the Global Gender Matters Network and Workshops

In a rapidly changing global world, gender matters cross borders and render new meanings.

Global Gender Matters organizes workshops which examine the transnational ways in which gender is configured socio-culturally, economically, and politically in Africa, Asia, the Caribbean, Latin America, and Europe.

Scholars with a particular interest in global gender matters are invited to get together to meet and explore how sexualized and racialized roles, relationships, powers, and conflicts interact with ideas about gender both in the Global South and the Global North.

Previous workshops were organised around themes such as Gendered Movements: Transgressions, Powers, and Vulnerabilities (2015), Gendered Migration: Global Flows of Visions and Agency (2014), Civil Society, Politics, and Opposition (2013), Post-Colonialism and Spaces of Resistance (2012), and News from "The Field": Work in Progress (2010).
